CONCERNING THE PROBLEMS OF THE INHABITANTS OF ESTONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA LIVING IN BORDER AREAS

In border towns and regions of the Baltic States people used to live in the same rhythm which various powers tried to break at different times. Such activities often were in contradiction to the everyday interests of the people.

Unsettled problems such as the legal procedure of border crossing are difficulties causing the greatest tension and incomprehension among the local population.

The Baltic Assembly proposes to the Baltic Council of Ministers that they urgently find solutions, through interstate negotiations, for such border areas and border towns.
